

Consumer Buying Behaviour In India

The mobile industry has experienced significant growth during the past two decades. As practically nobody owned a mobile phone in the 80s, today it is difficult to find a person without one. The penetration of mobile subscriptions commonly exceeds 100% in the developed world, and the number of subscriptions in developing countries is already outnumbering the number of subscriptions in developed countries. In fact, mobile phones are the largest consumer electronics industry today, and the new growth mainly originates from the developing economies. Mobile communication has made such an impact on the ways people interact and conduct business, that a mobile phone is already considered as a daily necessity in most of the developed countries of the world. Consumers are increasingly recognizing that the mobile handsets of today support many kinds of new services ranging from business solutions to entertainment content, in addition to the standard communications services.
