

Eliminating Project Waste: The massive business performance opportunity hiding in plain sight

After all of the cost-cutting, downsizing, outsourcing and efficiency drives - there remains one last bastion of excessive waste: Strategy Execution and Project Delivery - projects. Projects have escaped scrutiny because, among other reasons: Executives have assumed that investing in project management tools, training and experts will solve the problem of problem projects (Most) project managers and their managers (eg SPMOs and CIOs) appear super-confident that this time will be different Through its governance roles, the business has become complicit in perpetuating the problems, approving cost increases and accepting compromised results The measures of success have remained project-focused (on time/on budget) and the business measures have been fudged, compromised or ignored The industry (vendors, contractors, consultancies) has a vested interest in the status quo that allows them to make money at your expense. The cost of this waste is massive. Over expenditure, loss of competitiveness, significantly reduced profitability It is possible to double the delivered value while simultaneously reducing the costs to deliver. It is time to take action. It just requires business management to make a choice to choose to deal effectively with this waste, seize the opportunity and reap the returns. The payoff is the elimination of waste plus the opportunity to create a sustainable competitive advantage. Its time to act.

[\[PDF\] Oil, the Arab-Israeli Dispute, and the Industrial World: Horizons of Crisis \(Westview Special Studies on the Middle East\)](#)

[\[PDF\] Adolescentes: Manual de Uso Para Padres \(Spanish Edition\)](#)

[\[PDF\] The Nature of Light and Colour in the Open Air \(Dover Books on Earth Sciences\)](#)

[\[PDF\] Level 1 Nvq Diploma Hairdressing and Beauty Therapy Candidate Handbook. by Christine McMillan-Bodell, Samantha Taylor](#)

[\[PDF\] Albino Animals / Tagus River Bridge / Southern Italy / Fords Theatre / Bananas / La Jolla / Grenoble \(National Geographic School Bulletin, February 12, 1968 / Number 20\)](#)

