

The Mandela Effect: Confabulation or Fact?

World maps have changed, bible passages are not as we memorized them, movie lines are different, logos have morphed into things that we don't recognize. It's been called The Mandela Effect, so named because when Nelson Mandela died in 2013, a large number of people claimed that they remembered that Mandela had died in the 1980s. The Mandela Effect is a phenomenon that has hit us on a global level. Is it confabulation or fact? Here is a comprehensive explanation of all the anomalies that have been occurring in our society, making us question the validity of our memories, and the possibility that we might be insane, or maybe we have entered a different universe. This is not science fiction. It is very real, and has been affecting millions of people throughout the world.
