

Little Red Book 2005

The Little Red Book is Britain's leading directory to the road passenger transport industry. Fully updated, the 2005 edition provides full information on operators in Britain along with details on suppliers, societies, licensing, etc. Widely regarded as the Bible of the industry, the book has been published annually for more than 60 years. The new edition of Little Red Book is edited for the third time by Tony Pattison, previously editor of Janes Urban Transit Systems, who took over from Stephen Morris for the 2003 edition of the book. Over the years, the Little Red Book has established a reputation that is second to none as being the primary guide to the road passenger transport in Britain.
