

The Emerald in the Rose:: Happier Death

It is a journey that we shall all take, someday. Denial is pitiable and useless. And this trip seems to approach us as we draw closer to it. We have come to this planet, from, not outer space, but another dimension. And we must all return there. Our ancestors called this dimension, an alternate universe, heaven. Newborns are said to come from heaven, and the dying to be going there. The astonishing truth, implied by both science and spirituality, is that there does exist more than one universe, and we inhabit at least one other one the one to which we shall return. If, as the author believes, after studying the Mystery for over forty years, we do not come from nowhere, and, go back to nowhere, where are we, and what are we doing, during the long time not spent on earth? And, perhaps even more importantly, what should we be doing, or learning, during our lives here on earth?

In this captivating book, the author examines, from several different views, these and similar cosmic questions. He studies knowledge of the worlds greatest mysteries, formulating a viable and inclusive answer. This book is for believers and doubters. It is for all who seek to examine the depths of the human psyche far below those usually explored by psychology. With breathtaking and heartstopping macroscopicity, the vastness and immensity of this allimportant inquiry are studied, with a mindblasting conclusion!
